supplemental security income. On appeal, Gottschalk challenges the findings of the administrative law judge (ALJ) that (1) she retained the ability to perform unskilled work, and (2) her subjective complaints were not fully credible. After careful review, we reject both of these arguments and conclude substantial evidence on the record as a whole, and in particular the findings of a consulting mental health professional, supported the ALJ's determination Gottschalk was not disabled within the meaning of the Social Security Act. See Cunningham v. Apfel, 222 F.3d 496, 500 (8th Cir. 2000) (standard of review). Accordingly, we affirm the judgment of the district court. See 8th Cir. R. 47B.
