

Arkansas inmate Kasib Tauheed Bilal appeals the district court's adverse judgment in Bilal's civil rights suit against prison officials. Having carefully reviewed the record and the parties' briefs, we conclude the evidence failed to show Edward Engstrom knowingly or recklessly disregarded a known risk to Bilal. Cf. Andrews v. Siegal, 929 F.2d 1326, 1327-31 (8th Cir. 1991) (prison officials not liable for attack by mentally ill inmate; although pre-incarceration examination concluded attacker had potential for violence, prison officials justifiably relied on professional judgment of prison psychiatrist that inmate no longer posed serious threat).

Accordingly, we affirm. See 8th Cir. R. 47B.
